EDITOR JOURNAL.—For the first time since our Society was organized we ask a place in the columns of the Journal.
By request of Society I ask that the minutes of April 20th be published as sent, if they meet your approval. We wish those interested in the cause to know throughout our country what we are doing.
Chambersburg Temperance Alliance
Met according to adjournment; officers all present; good audience in numbers, singing, "Will Crown Them With Roses," after which minutes of previous meeting read and approved. A selection read by Mary Clark, "Strong Drink," selection good and well read, after which Jacob Overall, Jr., read a very good selection, "Can't We Go Somewhere." The piece not only contained good advice but warning to young men. George Martindill came next, with "A Parable," read well, in a quiet firmness. We are glad our little girls all take such interest in the cause, and all show such a willingness to do something; and by the way many of our wives and daughters have taken the pledge. D. Russell called on for a speech; responded by showing first, the great evil of making ardent spirits, and the low down position the seller occupies in the estimation of refined intelligence; also stated, as an engineer on the river, where every opportunity is given, the magnitude of intemperance, the large numbers who drink, and the great amount freighted up and down the Ohio river. Some thoughtful temperance people should not throw missiles at the whisky part of community; we think there is too much backwardness on the part of temperance men and women, in this direction. We too often fail to speak a word in favor of that which is so much important to every one. After Mr. Russell, M. Miller called on for a speech we should have had a week ago; glad to say we had one of his best efforts since our organization. H. Carter called; gave as a good talk; we glad to say he is still (though many years in temperance ranks) a good soldier, possessed with no ordinary amount of zeal. Oh! how we wish our young men were possessed with as much temperance zeal as many of our older ones are; we would have almost a reformation in our midst. We have had nearly five months weekly meetings, with few exceptions; with many of you I have often been tried and discouraged; the good we may not see, but mistakes in the future we can see a beacon light beaming the temperance tossed mariner on to labor and success. God grant that the day be not far distant when the mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters of this country, can have a voice equal to man on temperance questions. We ask not to engage in political strife, we ask not the President's chair, nor a seat in legislative halls, nor on the judge's bench; nor do we ask to fill an office of State or county, or the petty township offices; no true woman wishes to engage in these. We do ask in the name of high Heaven a right to save those loved ones who are so continually thrown in the clutches of the demon, alcohol. Oh! young man, stop, look, think, ask God to help you to resolve never to take anything that will intoxicate. God save the young men of our country from intemperance; let us one and all resolve to be more zealous in the future, showing to our enemies that we are a determined band, not easily frightened, either by threats, or black looks, but in a spirit of kindness show to all that right is right, and might is power. Temperance had its birth at the throne in Heaven, and God the Father will help and take care of his own, and we believe he will so aid the temperance loving people of the world at large that we will be able to sweep alcohol out of this fair land of ours, into the future, or in other words, annihilate it. A motion by brother Carter to have the minutes published in Journal, or county papers. Vote taken unanimously in favor of same.
Society adjourned to meet May 24.
M. MILLER, Pres't.
Mrs. A. D. GILLET, Sec'y.

MAKING.
A prominent merchant has compiled the following maxims from his own inquiry and experience:
1. Choose the kind of business you understand.
2. Capital is positively required in business, even if you have real estate outside and credit ever so good.
3. One kind of business is as much as a man can manage successfully. Investments on the outside do not generally pay, especially if you require the money in your business.
4. Buy cautiously and just what you want, and do not be persuaded to purchase what you do not need; if you do you will soon want what you can't buy.
5. Insure your stock; insure your store; insure your dwelling if you have one. If the rate is high it is only because the risk is great, and of course you should not take the risk yourself. A business that will not pay for insuring will not justify running.
6. Sell to good, responsible parties only. Sell on a specified time, and when your money is due demand it; do not let the account stand without note or interest for an indefinite period.
7. Sell at a reasonable profit and never misrepresent or overstate sales.
8. Live within your income; keep your business to yourself; have patience, and you will succeed.
9. Competition is the life of trade, but in trying to run your competitor out of business, be careful you do not run yourself out.
A Wise Nomination.
Our Republican friends did a wise thing at Columbus last week in placing Major Townsend at the head of their ticket for Secretary of State. He is a man of unimpeachable personal and political record, a good debater, well posted in current topics of the day, and will make his influence felt during the canvass.—[Athens Journal (Dom.)] bound many a noble man, his estate taken away, his wife of a broken heart, his children receiving their bread from the hand of charity. There are many thousands of deranged men and women confined in houses of woe in the United States, and from examination it is ascertained that one-third of this number have been brought to this melancholy state by intemperance. Strong drink has filled prisons and built gallows. "Ye who love the bottle consider what may be your end. Ye who hold the bottle to your neighbor's mouth, hearken to the truth, ye are accountable to God." "Woe to him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him and maketh him drunken."
California Lima Beans at Rovie Pitts & Co.

Temperance is the duty of every one. Banish ardent spirits from your houses. Do not drink them. Do not sell them. Do not make them, and we shall become a sober people. Bad men tell us we cannot put down this evil. But we can. Whole States are beginning to feel the influence of temperance exertion. The dove has come back to the ark with the olive sign that the waters are abating; let us then not be faithless, but believing, let us hear the warning call. Let us come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty, and we shall see all the ground dry, and oh, we trust our children's children shall see all so better men, that they shall not behold a drunkard. They shall know intemperance only as a crime of their fathers.
My friends, will you help on the cause of temperance? Ye young men whom God specially admonishes, say, "I will not drink." Ye blood the destroyer is most greedy, will you help us? Ye whom we love as mothers, as wives, and as sisters, and whose influence is mightier than all, will you help us? We ask your help upon the principles of entire abstinence. Adopt this maxim, adhere to it faithfully, urge it upon your children, press it upon your neighbor, pray for the aid of our heavenly Father, and we shall prevail. Temperance is a cause congenial to the word of God, and supported by the best and ablest men and women throughout the country. It cannot be defeated. It is a good cause. It will ultimately prevail. It will finally triumph.
